Innovative Living Options

The traditional choices for out-of-home placement for individuals with disabilities include foster homes, group homes, residential state facilities, state hospitals and private residential facilities. Even with these options, families may have difficulty in finding appropriate placements for individuals who are deafblind.

In the past decade more exciting living options that provide more individualized, personalized home settings have been identified and developed. In some cases, families are finding it possible to purchase a home in their child's name through creative financing without losing SSI or other subsidies. In other cases, individuals can rent a home or apartment by utilizing funding that, in the past, has only been available for group living.

These options are based upon every individual's fundamental right to live in a home of their choice. No person should be forced to live away from their community or in a setting which is based upon the severity or nature of the disability.

The creation of innovative living options requires collaboration, support of family and friends and the willingness to strive towards the realization of great expectations.

Here are some beginning steps:

- Contact your Regional Center to explore possibilities.
- Be willing to explore and research until you find support and answers.
- Contact local support groups like the ARC, independent living programs, Helen Keller National Center, parent support groups, etc. to find needed support and experience.
- Look for and attend conferences, workshops, and webinars that address your needs.

Be aware and mindful that building a new living option takes time and start as early as possible, anticipating a minimum of six months to over a year. Innovative living options will prove worth your time and effort.
